

MILES: Foundation helps kids live their best life

LIVING LIFE TO THE FULLEST

Monday's swim camp was a prime example of the passion that the Mileses show in dealing with the children helped by the foundation.

When a young girl named Ali Giesler was helped into the pool and began moving around in the water, her face beamed with pleasure.

"It's a big deal," Shayna Miles said, noting that she actually goes to Ali's home to teach her as part of the Rhea special ed program.

David Miles parents, Mike and Loretta Miles, were at the civic center Monday to help out.

Mike Miles pointed out what had happened during a session for ages 2-4 earlier that morning.

"A boy got into the water, probably the first time he's been in the water, and smiled so big. That's what it's all about," said Mike Miles.

"We want these children to have the best quality of life, the most inclusive life, they can have," said Shayna Miles.

David Miles, who works as an agronomist as his "real" job, said he feels fortunate that whenever he has time off from his work, he and Shayna can devote all their time to providing help and happiness for those children.

Looking around the pool after the session, she reflected on what the camp had meant to her.

"Oh, this is my element. This is my arena," she said.
